

This is an advanced course intended to provide the learners with an on-depth study of one two special topics that are profoundly supportive of EFL instruction.

Topic no.١: supportive means which enhance the long-term learning and retention of English as a foreign language . The attention is primarily directed towards the selection and employment of special teaching aids in the classroom. This course will emphasize a functional and communicative approach to the planning, selection and use of these aids. The attention of the learner will be directed to some psychological and cultural aspects that may positively or negatively interfere with the efficiency of instruction. This means that the selection in specific has to be directed and coordinated with the linguistic\functional\ communicative objectives of the FL course.

Topic No.٢: efficient, practical, and realistic means for the testing and evaluation of learners' achievement in English as a foreign language. Therefore, the course will address theoretical and practical aspects of language testing: examines purposes and types of language testing: examines purposes and types of language tests in relation to theories of language testing: examines purposes and types of language tests in relation to theories of language teaching goals. The course will also include directives and directions for planning, writing and administration of tests.
