This course provides a systematic design of instructional materials for modern e-learning settings. Students will design a blueprint for an instructional module by applying an instructional design model. Students will also develop an instructional module using systematic development models and established principles of instructional design for e-learning teaching and learning purposes. Furthermore, this course emphasizes on advanced problems in the design, development, evaluation and management of instructional programs for education and corporate environments.